and smiled grimly over the newspaper comments on his conduct in the police trial room on Thursday, when he use language to Policeman Marrinan of the Oak street station that made even the hardened regulars start. No one could be calmer or better satisfied over the situation than Devery himself. He is satisfied that in using the language he did to Marrinan rom the banch he did a perfectly proper

Careful note has been taken by certain people of all his violent utterances from the ench. They say they are delighted over this latest and greatest break that Devery has made. It is evidence of a kind that they wanted, and whether or not it is a part of the stenographer's record, and it probably is not, makes no difference, and no trouble is anticipated in fixing the language on the Deputy Commissioner.

The general belief is that fear inspired

Devery to his pitiless attack on Marrinan. Devery and his associates have good reason for siarm in the indications of growing ourage among the rank and file of the department. A few months ago a policeman would not have dared to go on the stand at Police Headquarters and tell a story like that told by Marrinan or like that told by Ryan. But Oneill opened the way. Persistent persecution goaded this ex-cavalryman to an act that is without precedent in the history of the department. and the general applause which fell to Oneill and the ample backing he has recourage into other members of the force have suffered similar persecutions, but have not dared to tell of them. Here was a condition of affairs most unwholesome really wouldn't do to let the matter go along without interruption. Something must be done to put down this suddenly acquired courage. No chance came until Marrinan courage. No chance came until Marrian testified, because Oneill had met with the limit and there really wasn't anything more that could be done to him.

But Marriaan was a mark of a different kind. He could be treated in a way that would effectually scare others from following him example, and so he was haufer. would effectually scare others from following his example, and so he was hauled down on a charge made by an inspector and despite the fact that there was considerable doubt of his guilt, was fined fifteen days pay. Those familiar with the regular Tammany procedure in such cases say that Policeman Ryan will be next: Ryan testified at the Oneill trial and his evidence was even worse for the police than that given by Marrinan, for in his case he promised to pay and actually was transthat given by Marrinan, for in his case he promised to pay and actually was transferred at the exact time and to the exact station that the man who approached him told him he would be. But Ryan may be saved because he did not tell the name of the man who approached him. He said that he did not know, but the belief is that he did know. He is alleged to have told certain persons in advance who the man was, but was afraid to tell when he found himself confronted by Devery and York.

him told him he would be. But Ryan may be saved because he did not tell the name of the man who approached him. He said that he did not know, but the belief is that he did not know, but the belief is that he did know. He is alleged to have told certain persons in advance who the man was, but was afraid to tell when he found himself confronted by Devery and York.

By browbeating and bulldozing it is hoped to stop any other policeman from telling stories of the kind that have already come out and, while the scheme may work, it is hardly possible that it will, for the movement against Devery is well under way and all those who suffer for helping it along with the testimony of their own experiences will be well looked out for. Slowly but surely the evidence of the extistence of a regularly organized system of extorting money from patrolmen is coming to light, and already the men who are supposed to be doing this work have been spotted. One of them, the sergeant at Police Headquarters, who denied his connection with any such scheme several days ago, is still busily engaged in denying days ago, is still busily engaged in denying his connection with any blackmailing business. The other, whose name has not been mentioned yet, but against whom a great deal of circumstantial evidence has already been collected, has been keep-

DR. WILLIAMS MUST ANSWER. Permal Charges Prepared Against the

The Board of Coroners of Manhattan, held a meeting yesterday and discussed the complaint against Coroner's Physician Hamilton Williams. As a result of the meeting Coroner Zucca notified Dr. Williams to appear before him on Tuesday

It is alleged in the formal charges that Dr. Williams when attending Coroner's cases at the several public hospitals in Manhattan had been uniformly discourteous in his bearing toward officials and em-ployece of the hospitals, and particularly toward young doctors and medical students who were anxious to be present at autopsies, that he was dilatory, discourteous, rude and brusque in attending the cases of Mrs. Josephine E. Murray of 56 Edgecombe avenue who died in the J. Hood Wright Hospital on Aug. 22; of Mrs. Mollie Feist who died at Mount Sinai Hospital on Aug. The sixth specification is as follows:
"In many instances of so-called 'Coroner's cases, where your services as Coroner's physician were called into requisition, and where inquiries were made of you concerning such cases, your conduct has not been courteous, kind or respectful, but on the contrary, it has been uniformly discourteous, unkind and disrespectful, causing grief and annoyance to the relatives and friends of the deceased and calculated to bring the office of Coroner into disrepute and disgrace."

of a fee varying from $5 to $15, which you exacted and collected in such cases. This was an illegal and improper exaction on your part, if not illegal, it was unconscionable and calculated to bring your position and that of the Coroner into public disrepute. Dr. Williams denied emphatically last night that he had been dilatory or discourteous in any of his cases. In regard to the complaint that he charged a fee when giving a certificate in insurance cases, Dr. Williams said that was so, and he would continue to charge, as it was perfectly legal for him to do so. Dr. Williams said the allegations against him would not hold water, and that he would file a written answer to them denying them all.

The Board decided that it would request the Civil Service Board to take the places of Coroner's physician and Coroner's private clerk off the classified list, as they were confidential employees.

PAINE COMMITTED NO CRIME, But, Justice McAdam Says, Broker Should Return Money to Thorner.

Broker J. Overton Paine, who was held yesterday in the Essex Market court in $1,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge made by Maurice A Thorner of grand larceny was before Judge McAdam of the Supreme Court in the afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus. An application was made for his discharge on the cation was made for his discharge on the ground that his detentibn was illegal, and Judge McAdam stated that he would give his decision on Monday and paroled Paine in the custody of his counsel.

Abraham Gruber, who represented the accused broker, who is charged with withholding $167 put up for margins in May, contended that the act charged did not constitute a crime and that the Magistrate had erred in holding his client.

After looking into the matter Judge McAdam expressed the opinion that an actual crime had not been made out. "If Paine has taken this money, as charged, he said, "and has not returned it, he has done wrong, but that wrong is not criminal. He should return the money. The formal complaint does not charge an actual crime."
